It is said that the camel, if given the least encouragement, will quickly acquire a smoking habit, and that the camel carrier who has a few cases of opium tucked in his clothes for distribution among the thirstless ones can do wonders with the animals. They carry a bit of wood, which is shaped into a cigarholder and adapted to the camel's mouth, and as a final touch is well nigh exhausted, he can be coiled upon to get up a travel many a mile after a smoke.

RYAN CASE IS PUT OVER INDEFINITELY

William Cronin, Material Witness Cannot Be Found Says Defense.

Presenting an affidavit that William J. Cronin, a material witness in the Ryan case, cannot be found, the defense today secured a continuance in the case against Frank Ryan from Judge George Grimm at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The motion came up when Judge Grimm was considering the order of trial of the criminal cases to be tried in circuit court next week. The absence of Cronin, the attorney for the defense stated, made it impossible for the presentation of evidence in the Ryan case. It was alleged that Cronin was present when it was alleged Ryan struck Patrolman Patrick Stein with a hammer.

Under the order of trial set by Judge George Grimm the state against James Burke will be tried first and the Ryan case will follow. Earl Connors, Reenie Herdendorf, Ray Nolan, Arthur Lenz and Casper Berg.

It was stated that the criminal cases will take about three days.

BOARD ADJOURNS AFTER SAYING "NO" ON SNOW REMOVAL

After hearings a report by County Highway Commissioner Charles Brodeur, Wednesday afternoon, the county board adjourned until January 18, 1921.

During the late rush of business on highways the county board passed a resolution absolving them from any responsibility of clearing the roads of snow this winter. They simply passed the "buck" off the board's shoulder without comment. The resolution, it was said after the session, would make it clear the county did not have money to put to clearing roads.

BOLD, BAD MAN NOT FROM JANESVILLE

Reports from Chicago that a man giving his name as James J. Volst, of his home as Janesville, who was arrested there Wednesday, puzzled police here today. No such man is known by local police. His name is not listed in any city directory.

"He must have had a couple of shots of wine or pepsin when he gave his home as Janesville," said Chief Morley.

Volst was arrested when he accosted a girl telling her he was a bold bad man, with a terrible past. He declared he had made a $10,000 robbery in Janesville the other day and had come to "polish" Chicago. He claimed to have been a member of the King's Road, Epworth league, and Sunbeam club here.

He was fined $15 in Chicago after an investigation disclosed he had a spotless past.

THANKSGIVING DAY TRAFFIC IS HEAVY

Thanksgiving day traffic on both the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago & Northwestern railroads was about twice the normal, according to estimates made at the local ticket offices of each line today. Wednesday was the big day with an equal number going and coming. At the Milwaukee office it was stated that a business of more than $2,000 was transacted. While it was impossible to get figures at the Northwestern offices, the estimate there would be still larger based upon the usually bigger business done by that line here. Two to three coaches were added to all local and through trains on both roads to handle the business. The traffic this year, however, was approximately the same as Thanksgiving day of last year.

ONE MONTH REMAINS TO JOIN RED CROSS

Although the Red Cross campaign closed officially Thanksgiving day in Janesville, it is announced by Miss Mattie Alden, executive secretary, that memberships will be accepted and solicited until January 1, as only 1,755 members were enrolled during the campaign.

The city hall and the Shurtleff company were the only two organizations of the city which reported a 100 percent enrollment. Enough money is on hand in the treasury of the local chapter to support the work in Janesville for the coming year, but if the majority of the cities of the country would fall short of their membership quota as did the local chapter, the national organization would be greatly hampered in its work.

Subscriptions should be sent to the secretary in the postoffice building or may be left at the Chamber of Commerce or the Janesville Center. It is more convenient. Additional members are:

Mrs. J. P. Collier, E. J. Dixon, Edna Drummond, Isabelle Enright, E. Erickson, Mrs. L. Farnsworth, John Foster, Charles Gregory, Allan Hopkin, John E. Jones, Mrs. Mary Hopkins, Clarence Williams.

Making the Dollar Work Faster

For years past the going interest rate on farm mortgages has been from 5% to 6%. The interest rate was low because investors found that a good farm mortgage was as safe an investment as they could hold. Their experience had proved this fact.

Owing to the increased rates which borrowers are compelled to pay on all classes of security we are able to get better rates on farm mortgages and are glad to give our customers the opportunity of investing in these safe securities at the advanced rates.

We offer these safe farm mortgages at this time at 6 1/4% to 7%

on from three to seven years time.

Now is the time to invest.

That question is always asked by a patron when discussing administration of his estate by a Trust Company. The law of Wisconsin provides that whoever acts as administrator or executor of an estate shall receive $50 for the first $1000 of the personal property handled and $10 for each additional $1000.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER V
VIOLET'S ADDITION
I never knew clear the difference between my life now, and then, I think I must give more of the little details of our days at that time.

That supper, for instance, was typical. We rosioped, we quarreled, or we ate in sullen silence. Or else we told each other about the worries of the past day and speculated about the worries of to-morrow.

The table is the last place in the world to bring quarrels or worries. Many a marriage has been wrecked because the wife complained or the husband growled over the dinner table.

It was natural enough, in our case. We never met as a family except at meals, and there our various differences rubbed against each other, and we irritated each other.

Co-night, after Jim had fled from the table, and after Jim, first to finish, had gotten up and stalked off without a word, Esther gathered up the dishes, and I began to help her.

"Go on in and do your lessons," I told Vi. "I'll wipe and put things away."

"The milk cans have to be scoured yet," Esther fretted. "And I think I'd better take those small rag rugs from the bedrooms and put them to soak. To-morrow I'll wash them. Vi can get them."

"I'll let her study," I protested. "Well," Esther conceded, "it's got to be done. So much cold this year I can't believe it."

She put the dish on the table, where she picked up the rag rug, and dripping from the tin water, then she attacked a pile of pans, two frying pans of heavy iron, coated now with dark cold grease.

any number of sauce pans. We were not a large family, but we managed to use up an immense amount of dishes and utensils at a meal. Esther poured more hot water into her dish pan, and soaped her rag from a bar of home-made washing soap. I noticed the strong hot suds. They were red and puffy-looking—in the old days she had cunning, chubby little hands with short, plump little fingers and thick and stained indelibly from work.

"Jim says he's got a man to come this Spring for the sowing," she said. "I hope he stays through the summer. Jim says they're asking the same wages now. Well, I'll clean the attic room for him." Our last hired man had left us in the fall and gone to the city to work in the factories. We had been trying to get a new one for weeks.

"Jim really needs two men, on this big place," I suggested. For the Esthairs' farm was really fair sized; to be run by many helpers, should always tried to do the work of three, I went on.

"Think of the money it costs to hire work—and they loaf when you're not looking," Esther answered, taking the true "back country" view, that the way to economize is to spend less, rather than to make more.

"We got a bit laid by, of course," she went on, lifting the last pan from the water and setting it from her wringing cloth, then setting it on the back of the stove to dry. "But there's so much to spend it on."

And the work. Then Vi graduates June, and there's another dress to make, and another for class day. That'll mean white shoes too. "I'll buy her white silk stockings as a present," I suggested. "Vi had never had a pair of silk stockings—none of us had, as far as that goes. And it was the girl's great ambition. I had a little money—I did not know how much—but all I used it for was to spend it on my family."

"You'll put notions in her head," Esther fretted. "Silk stockings! I was married with cotton ones—but girls these days have ideas different from then. Vi's got enough notions as it is."

"But one pair of silk stockings won't hurt," I protested. "I'll have to have a new dress for the commencement, too, and so will you." Esther grumbled. "That'll mean taking off a couple of days and going over to Hartford shopping. We can stay with the Tuckers. And cleaning to do—and Jim must get a new suit; his best one is too small by now."

She fretted along, her hands in the dishpan full of soapy water. Esther could always think of work for months ahead, and mention every last duty for weeks.

"But thank goodness, it'll be over then she ended up. "Laura will probably be getting married soon, but Vi will be home to help."

Then Vi came into the room, her cheeks pinker than ever, her eyes very bright. I knew she had nerved herself for some unusual effort, and taking the room to help, she announced, trying to make her voice calm. "I'm going—that is, I want to go—to college."

Esther turned to her, her jaw lax so her mouth was slightly open. Vi looked back at her with all determination of youth in her face.

To-morrow, the Family Argument

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR TESSIE:

Your few but choice remarks on Man o' War, the aeroplane among horses, show that as a student of horsemanship you might graduate, with any luck, in about eighty years. Don't let that discourage you, though, in case you ever by any misfortune and yourself in the act of betting on a horse race, because a woman in the depths of her ignorance can pick a winner by shutting her eyes and stabbing the entry list with her hatpin better than a man can exerting all his natural common sense and intellect. If women can do that by intuition, they don't need sense, that's my motto.

Now don't get to thinking I'm advising you to bet on horse races. It would be better to sink your money out of eight in Russian bonds or some other comparatively safe investment. My scorn for people that lose playing the races is only equalled by my envy of the ones that win.

Well, Tessie, I hope you're not running to extremes in powdering your nose in my absence. Whenever I look around and see girls of all ages in all directions with their noses giving correct imitations of a snow clad mountain peak at sunset—the sunset being faithfully represented by the rouge on the surrounding territory—why I start to get uneasy as to how you're getting on in that respect with no husband to guide you.

Now Tessie, you know I don't object to a minimum of powder to subdue the proverbial shine, but Tessie, after you clean the front steps you don't leave the bucket setting out there, do you? Well then, after women conquer their worst enemy, the shine on their nose, why do they want to walk about among a lot of innocent bystanders behind an overdose of powder? Not that I'm accusing you of anything, Tessie, only use the little old bean, fair spouse, use the little old bean.

Tell the baby I was asking for him. Always truly your husband, ned nuts. Put balls in circular hole of pineapple. Serve with cooked salad dressing.

JOE.

RABBIT SEASON
Select a rabbit that is plump and short necked, with the flesh tight and without discoloration. When an animal is to be used for roasting, choose a young animal under a year old, as it will be more tender.

Dress a Rabbit—In killing grasp firmly by the hind legs, head hanging downward, and strike the animal a sharp blow on the back of the head. The throat should be cut immediately and the rabbit thoroughly bled. Hang up by the gambles joints as you would a sheep or hog.

To Skin a Rabbit—Cut off the head and feet. Make a cut in the skin across the middle of the back. Put both hands into the cut and draw the skin back until it comes to the legs. Grasp the body in the left hand and draw the skin off over the legs with the right hand.

To Clean a Rabbit—Make a cut down the abdomen to neck, being careful not to cut entrails; remove same, wash carcass and soak.

To Out a Rabbit for Steaming—First the hind legs are removed at the joint in a manner similar to the method used for removing the legs from chicken, cutting through the flesh, then bending back at the joint. Next the fore legs are removed at the joint, but of course the pieces are much smaller. All that is left is the back, which is divided at a point near the middle.

Two medium rabbits will serve eight persons.

Cooking—In the manner of cooking depends on the manner of cooking. Rabbit meat should be soaked in salted water; this improves the flavor and draws the blood. A little vinegar added to the water helps to remove the wild flavor.

It must be remembered that the meat is free from fat, therefore fat in some cases must be used with it. For frying and roasting bacon is best; for boiling salt pork is often used; butter and oil are excellent in many ways of cooking it.

Baked Onions—Peel as many onions as are required, and boil in salted water until tender, but not broken. When cold, dip them in melted butter and roll in fine bread crumbs which have been seasoned with sage, salt and pepper. Place in well greased baking dish and brown in hot oven. Add a little hot water if necessary while baking.

Peas and Onions—One pound fresh roasted peanuts, one head of crisp lettuce. Wash the lettuce and crisp it in the refrigerator. Halve the head, and pile them in the leaves of lettuce. Dress with French dressing.

Sour Milk Pancakes—On pint of sour milk (buttermilk is better) three slices of bakers' bread soaked overnight. In the morning add one-half teaspoon salt, and one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon saleratus dissolved in milk, one teaspoon baking powder, one and one-half cups flour.

Stir well. This makes enough for two people.

DISCOVERIES.

A cement kitchen floor is ideal; it can be hose washed, is sanitary and cheapest in the end.

Waterproof varnish is used to preserve linoleum; it will keep water from getting into the pores.

Mix bluing with hot water before adding to rinsing water and clothes will not be streaky even if hot water is used.

Linens to be put away for some time should be put in something blue, either blue paper or blue material. They will not turn yellow.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl seventeen years of age and a junior in high school. I have a very good boy friend who lives in another state. He has finished high school and has been to college for two years. He has spoken to me of marriage and I am writing to you for advice. He is a very respectful young gentleman and has been keeping steady company with me for two years. I have known him all my life.

A BLONDE.
You are too young to become engaged. If your love is true it will last, and two or three years from now you can become engaged with more assurance that you are doing the right thing.

Dear Mrs. Thompson. I have been married nineteen years and have three wonderful children aged seventeen, fourteen and twelve. I am thirty-five years old.

All my life has been unhappy and unsettled and dissatisfied. I was only a child when my parents took this man to please my parents, knowing I didn't love him.

I have recently met a man I love, the only time I have ever loved anyone in my life.

Could you help me solve this problem, as my children are the first to be considered, for I worship him.

HOPEFUL.
I would not advise you to give up a good husband for a man who is willing to make love to a married woman. Your husband's love for you has been tested and proved true. Doubtless if you were married to him, you would find him disapproving in many respects and after the course of a few months or a year, you would care for him more than you do your husband.

Do not be blind to the goodness in your husband. If you were to lose him you would find how much he has meant to you. Women the wide world over would envy you for the contentment which is yours if you are willing to see it and appreciate it.

Your children are entitled to their own father who will take more interest in them than any other man. For their sake, if for no other reason, be true to your marriage.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

Here's a Man Who Talks Too Much!

"Dear Miss Page—A boy I know takes me to movies and concerts quite a lot, but he always talks during the whole show, almost out loud. He expects me to answer him, and I know people want to know what is there any way I can tell him of this without offending him?" Agnes.

I know, Agnes—it embarrasses you and annoys everyone around you. If he won't take the hint when you just smile and nod instead of answering him.

Till someone sitting near you acts in the same discourteous manner; then I'd whisper, or so innocently, "If there is one thing I cannot understand it is how people can be so thoughtless as to disturb their neighbors in an audience like this."

And the next chance that offered, I'd say again, "Isn't it unkind of people to spoil one's evening like that, by talking so that we couldn't hear at all?"

Keep varying little remarks like that until he understands. And I think he won't be offended if you are tactful—because you say he will have to admit to himself that you are right.

SPARE THEIR FEELINGS
"Dear Miss Page: Will you please tell me whether it is considered proper to leave the cards of the giver on wedding presents when displaying them at the wedding reception?" Doris.

This is not done any more, probably because we have discovered that it often results in embarrassment for those who are unable to give as expensive presents as their love for the bride would dictate.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the questions.

Can You Imagine

A square meal in which bread does not take an important place? Is there another food of which this may be said?

Can you think of another food that doesn't taste better for being eaten with bread?

That's because bread is so nearly a complete food in itself. It contains all food substances in about the proportions needed for building up the body and for giving strength and energy.

And it's the cheapest food on the whole list.

But it must be good bread, made from good flour.

Mother Hubbard Flour

is more than good flour—it's the best. It's made from the choicest parts of the best wheat to be had and milled with the most exacting care.

Use MOTHER HUBBARD for highest quality of bread and more loaves to the sack. Cheaper flour can be made from low grade wheat and by using the poorer parts of that wheat, but it's not so economical or of such exquisite quality.

"HARDING LEAGUE" TO BE NEW NAME

Complete Divorce of League And Treaty to Follow Negotiations.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
(Copyright 1920, Janesville Daily Gazette.)

Washington, Nov. 26.—The tendency of the assembly of the league of nations now meeting in Geneva to postpone consideration of amendments to the covenant until after President-elect Harding shall have been inaugurated was received in Washington by friends of Senator Harding as confirmation of their oft-repeated statement that the nation would always be ready to form a new association with the United States as an associate in the enterprise.

Meaning Article Ten
Senator Harding's friends insist that during the campaign he was frequently misrepresented by political opponents on the subject of the league of nations. When he spoke of a new association the senator meant that he did not care whether the present league was revised and modified or a new institution created so long as the objectionable features of article 10—its guarantee of territorial integrity and implications of military force—were entirely eliminated. (When he speaks of the league as being "dead," or when he refers as he did at Des Moines last August to turning his back on obligations, he means article 10.)

The "Harding" League
His friends therefore declare that insofar as an international conference has been brought about by the present league and negotiation is thus made easier, no disposition to revise the league exists in every detail from the present organization. Nevertheless they say that when Mr. Harding formulates his program of changes he will suggest other countries will be fundamental and that they will absolutely alter the character of the covenant so that the league will be known as the Harding league in stead of the Wilson league.

McCormick Off for Europe
Senator Modest McCormick of Illinois, who has just sailed for Europe, is one of the so-called "revisionists" who voted along with Senators Borah and Johnson against the treaty with or without the Lodge reservations. He has said that he needs more time to negotiate for new understanding with the United States and that he personally had been assured by persons close to foreign governments of their readiness to accept the American program. His visit to Europe is fully expected to develop interesting conclusions which will be carried to Senator Harding at Marion, Mr. McCormick is in no sense an official representative of Mr. Harding, but he has apprised Senator Harding of his plans. The Illinois senator differs from other members of the revisionist group in that he sees the necessity of some sort of world association of which America shall play a part in her way.

Revising Peace Treaty
Incidentally considerable pressure is being brought to bear upon President-elect Harding to persuade him to revise the peace treaty. There is no doubt that the peace treaty would be a landmark in the history of the world. It would separate the peace treaty from the world association idea so that the United States would never be obliged to participate in the enforcement of the treaty. Whether such a separation will be practicable is a moot point. So many compromises were worked out in it that some of the nations which have most at stake would fear that a reopening of the treaty would lead to tangled situations and thus to political crises throughout Europe.

Divorce of Treaty and League
However, there seems to be no question that the proposal to make the peace treaty completely divorced from the league of nations as the original round robin presented by the republican senators as proposed when President Wilson sent his first trip to the United States from the peace conference.

Of course the action of the assembly of the league of nations in waiting for proposals from the United States to change the covenant is interpreted here as that it is apt to be even greater responsibility for early action on President-elect Harding. It is viewed as the first overture by Europe to Senator Harding, and some of those who know him best are convinced that he will not lose the opportunity to make a new proposal for the preservation of world peace.

Voice of the People

The Gazette's voice of the people is open to every one. It is the people's column where they may voice their opinions on any and all questions. The Gazette's policy is to publish all contributions to this department, but it does make it necessary that the name of the writer be known to the editor of the Gazette. He alone is the custodian of this information. If the writer does not care for any reason to sign his name to the contribution, therefore any letter without the name of the writer will simply be considered as a waste basket. It is time poorly occupied to write letters and send them to the "Voice of the People" if the writer is not sure that he will be published. In the last week, all good and timely, worth printing too, have taken the course to oblige the writer by publishing them. The writers failed to identify themselves.

Sailors Devise New Thrilling Water Sport

Chicago.—Undeterred by the chill of Lake Michigan's waves in November, sailors at the Green Lakes National Training Station have perfected a new sea sport that puts surf boat riding in the parlor class. The sailors have discarded fast speed boats to pull their aquaplanes, borrowed the services of a set plane, and with the aid of a small airplane behind the speeding albatross through the water at 60 miles an hour. Only the most skillful riders can stand upright on one of the hay bales in the terrific pace. At 60 miles an hour only the rear tip of the board rides on the waves.

JUDGE BECKER CANNOT COLLECT "BACK" SALARY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 26.—Judge J. M. Becker of Green county, who was convicted on August 17, 1918, under the espionage law, cannot collect his salary, as a result of having been ousted, according to an opinion rendered by Deputy Attorney General M. E. O'Neil, to the district attorney of Green county H. M. Caradine.

After he had been convicted a successor was appointed to Judge Becker, under a ruling given by the attorney general's department that "such a conviction creates an absolute or legal vacancy as to the death of the incumbent." Mr. Becker later filed a claim for compensation for the time he lost.

"As has been pointed out above, the statute at the time of the claimant's conviction contained no provision for restoring to office or payment of the emoluments of office to an individual convicted, and whose sentence was reversed on appeal," the decision reads. "When the claimant was convicted of the offense, he automatically lost all right to office, and to the compensation provided for the discharge of his functions."

FARM BUREAU HEARS SPEAKERS

(By Gazette Correspondent.)

Hanover.—The entertainment given under the auspices of Plymouth branch of the Farm Bureau Tuesday evening was a decided success. A musical program, consisting of instrumental and vocal numbers, recitations and a dialogue was given an excellent rendition. The program was given by Prof. E. L. Madison, Ray, M. Smith, Footville, and county agent Glasco furnished delightful variety. Taking for his subject "The Dairy Cow" Prof. Hulse drew chiefly in good sires, cow testing and the tuberculin test. His talk was incentive toward greater and better production. The Rev. Mr. Smith stressed the educational side of home life on the farm and his address was an appeal for more progress along those lines.

County Agent Glasco complimented the Plymouth branch of the Farm Bureau in general, its chairman and various prominent leaders in particular, for the great progressive spirit being exhibited here and briefly explained the Farm Bureau's plan of urging members to buy stock of this organization, which he declared was a safe investment and of great help to the farmer. All the addresses were well received and appreciated by the large audience which taxed the capacity of Borkenhagen's hall.

It is just such meetings as these combining entertainment with instruction which every farm community needs, and the members of the local branch of the Farm Bureau are to be congratulated for their endeavors to supply such stimulating meetings. Those taking part in the program were: Luther Johnson, Mr. Jensen, Mr. Swain, director, and cornet soloist, Miss Gimmesdahl vocal selections. Mr. Swain, violin, the Misses Millard and Burrow, recitations and the discussion was given by the pupils of school district No. 5. After the program eats were enjoyed.

Personal News.
Mr. Ehrlicher left for Florida last Thursday. He will spend the winter there. A large delegation from the local branch of the Farm Bureau attended the box social in Plymouth Friday evening. A number from Hanover were present at the Borgen funeral at Oshkosh Saturday.

Walters was a Janesville visitor Monday. Mrs. A. Jensen returned from an extended trip to South Dakota Monday evening. The pupils of the school are overjoyed at the purchase of a Victrola, which was made possible by the proceeds of the entertainment given recently. Another program will be given in order to complete payments on the instrument. This is a step in the right direction and should be liberally supported.

LABOR SUPPLY IS IN EXCESS OF DEMAND

(By Associated Press.)

Madison.—The labor supply in Wisconsin has been in excess of the demand for many kinds of work during the month of October, according to a report of the Industrial Commission based on the experience of 11 employment offices of the state.

The actual number of male applicants was 96 per cent of the demand, while the supply of women applicants was 75 per cent of the demand. This situation was due wholly to the great demand for wood laborers, which has now been met, the commission says. In excess of labor was shown in all clerical positions and in all semi-skilled lines, as well as in many of the occupations of the service offices. There was an excess of common labor, inexperienced lumbermen were warned to stay away from lumber camps, and only experienced men are being hired.

The reports of the offices show that for the first time in years the supply of women for domestic service practically equals the demand. During the month there was a surplus of male applicants in Green Bay, La Crosse, Madison, Oshkosh, Oakdale, Racine and Wausau. There was a surplus of female applicants in Green Bay, Oshkosh, Racine and Sheboygan.

Many Lives Saved by Educational Campaign

Madison.—More than 600 lives are being saved yearly by the educational campaign of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association, Dwight Harrington, a member of the association, declared at a meeting of the Rotary club here. He said that since 1907 the tuberculosis mortality has dropped from 107 per 100,000 to 82. Dr. Harrington pointed out that over 6,000 chest examinations have been made in Wisconsin by the association, with a record of 15 per cent in suspicious cases of tuberculosis.

Insufficient rain accounts for the absence of crops in nearly a third of the country.

Superior.—Robbie Rooney, 32, a newsboy, was seriously injured when struck by an automobile. The accident occurred when the boy started across the street counting the papers. He had received on his sale of papers. He did not see the approaching car. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital, but refused to enter, insisting that he be taken to his home. The car was said to have been driven by Chris Peterson, local hotel man.
